

Lima School of Economics – Universidad de Piura

Young Visiting Scholar Program

March-August 2019

Program

The economics department at Universidad de Piura aims to produce cutting-edge research in economics. As part of this goal, it has organized six international workshops for young economists since 2007. To complement this effort, it is now inviting applications for its First Young Visiting Scholar program, as we recognize the growing importance of gathering and connecting young scholars from the best academic institutions in the world.

The Young Visiting Scholar program offers the following benefits:

- Interaction and collaboration with faculty members and other local researchers
- Access to Peruvian data
- Private office (with facilities)
- Presentations in seminars

This first call is for the period March-August 2019. The minimum length of the stay is three months. We may accept up to 2 visiting scholars.

Financial support

In case of need, the economics department could provide up to US$1500 to cover air tickets and US$900 for monthly expenses.

Eligibility

Scholars who are currently enrolled in a PhD program in Economics/Finance/Public Policy or who have graduated after 2017 are encouraged to apply.

Application process

Please send your CV, along with a personal statement to fernando.fernandez@udep.pe. Priority will be given to scholars interested in working with data or topics related to Peru or Latin America. The deadline to apply is January 21st 2019.
